OUR HISTORY

The University pool was started by a group of Rutgers University faculty and senior level administrators. The group got together in the winter of 1960. They wanted a place where people could go to have a nice peaceful place to relax and to swim. After looking at vacant campus land, they chose the present site of the pool because it was quiet and surrounded by trees. They leased the land from the University and started building the pool with money raised by selling bonds to members. The pool was finished and opened by the summer of 1961.
